TAB B

TRANSPORTATION OF PERSONAL AND HOUSEHOLD
EFFECTS AND AUTOMOBILES

Accurate computation of the cost of transportation of effects may be somewhat more difficult than computation of the travel of personnel. Lack of knowledge of exact weights and variable rates used by carriers could result in substantial differences in the cost to individuals, even those proceeding to the same post. Also, inexperience in transportation practices could be costly to the individuals. As in the case of travel of personnel, we should provide a sum which is adequate for the average case and be willing to accept reasonable claims for unforeseen substantial additional expense. In all cases, the individual should clearly understand that insurance, and making prudent arrangements, are solely his responsibility.
